AMERICANS KEPT
IN POLITICAL IGNORANCE
EDITOR, PRESS: Further

evidence of how Americans are deliberately kept in political ignorance was discernable recently. Washington announced that the Bobby Baker scandals would receive that "long hard look" only after elections.

Since 1960 the CIA has maintained its "protection" over Michael Goliniewski which prevents his appearance before proper Congressional Committees. No action has been taken on the parts of his information which appeared in the Journal American and which showed Red infiltration and spying on the part of American envoys and named at least 19 Red agents in the service of the American Government. Not another American newspaper sent reporters to investigate.

It is clear that the Warren report, with all its "can't be proved but" and "we think" and "may be" says "We think Oswald, despite all known intimacy with Communist agents in Russia and Cuba and Mexico and the U.S., acted on his own". If it requires a Congressional investigation to determine the truth, we should have it.

If these shortcomings of the written word are not enough to set off an alarm, will it awaken America to now learn of the chicanery that is apparently appearing on TV? In Ft. Worth; NBC, NBC News, and Huntley and Brinkley are being sued for a total of $8 million. The suits allege the defendants "did maliciously broadcast false and untrue matters — that the FBI had arrested certain parties who were engaged in the selling of arms and ammunition (which were unlawfully and feloniously acquired to the John Birch Society)". NBC had apparently staged the entire bit, falsifying the role of that Society and even using actors to depict FBI agents.

Those who lie to us for whatever excuse, or slant our news, or hail the ilk of Bobby Baker in loyal friendship, or perceive more good in foreign philosophies than in American free-enterprise should not be representing this "Nation under God". And they won't — if

Sees No Morality
In Barry's Ideas

GLEN FLORA, Oct. 29 — Sen. Goldwater bemoans the lack of morality in high places, implying that he himself has high moral standards. Yet in his self-righteousness he advocates, among other virtuous proposals, a tighter economic blockade of Cuba.

His conservative conscience would not be bothered by the human suffering which would result from such action. At least, the Cubans would suffer hunger. And very likely war might result.

Castro might react in desperation with a rash military move, giving the CIA and the Pentagon an excuse to instigate an invasion of the island or the bombing of the Cubans into submission.

Morality? Our government, under both major political parties, has acted in a highly immoral manner toward "enemy" peoples in the name of Good — Democracy, Freedom.

Neither party has a monopoly on morality. But I am afraid that if Goldwater were elected, he and his band of super-patriots might use our military power to try to impose their concept of what is Right — that is, nineteenth century-rugged individualist-free enterprise-Americanism — on a world unwilling to accept it.

After all, extremism in the pursuit of such a noble objective would be no vice. And moderation would be no virtue. It might mean nuclear war but, it could be argued, we all have to die sooner or later, anyway. Let's all die together, if we must, to achieve "victory." — Walter Gustafson

Editor: It is beyond my conception how any intelligent American can vote for the L.B.J.-Humphrey ticket unless he be a dedicated Democrat who would vote for a gorilla if he were nominated, or someone who is benefiting from the largess of the government.

I also wonder, if through some miracle Goldwater is elected, how much housecleaning he can do in the State Department and in the CIA to rid us of the pinkos, liberals, do-gooders, and downright Communists.
